

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

EDUCATION.—This very important subject was noticed in the Second Number of the CAMBRO-BRITON : and its intimate connection with the welfare of the country cannot be too frequently urged upon the public attention. When the deficiency of public schools was mentioned on the former occasion as an evil, peculiarly affecting the Principality, an exception ought to have been made in favour of South Wales, where a spirit of liberality seems to prevail in this respect truly worthy of general imitation. This observation is applicable, in a particular manner, to the Carmarthen Grammar School, whose public recitations on the 22d and 23d of December last seem to have indicated a degree of general improvement, as well as of individual talent, highly creditable both to the conductors and pupils of that respectable Seminary. And it deserves to be mentioned, that the cultivation of the Welsh tongue forms a prominent feature in the system of education pursued at this school; a characteristic, that, while it confers so much honour on this particular establishment, reflects a proportionate disgrace on most others in Wales. Several Welsh productions were very ably recited on the occasion above-mentioned, as well as many in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and English.—On the 23d of December the dramatic performances of the students of the Cardigan Grammar School, which had been suspended in consequence of an accident in the Town-hall on the 17th of that month, were resumed with great success. The ability, with which the characters were supported, drew forth the applause of a numerous and respectable audience. The performance on this occasion was Mrs. Haznah Moore's Sacred Drama of David and Goliath.—On the 4th of January the public examination of the children of the British School, at Newport in Monmouthshire, took place in the presence of Sir C. Morgan, the Patron, and other distinguished individuals. Sir C. Morgan's liberal patronage of this very laudable institution is only one amongst many of the public spirited acts, which ought to secure the gratitude of his country.

* * *

CHARITABLE DONATIONS.—The inclemency of the late season, unequalled for many years, has not failed to have its natural effect on the characteristic benevolence of this country. The misery, necessarily occasioned by the severity of the weather, has in consequence experienced very general relief throughout the kingdom. And the inhabitants of Wales have had their share in this beneficent work. The following instances deserve to be here recorded.—On the 23d of December the Rev.